P R E F A C E.

§ 1. THE information which is extant concerning Nennius, the presumed author of the work entitled ‘Historia Britonum,’ is so scanty, and the literary history of that production, external and internal, is so obscure and contradictory, that we may despair of being able to decide, with any degree of accuracy, either as to the age, the historical value, or the authorship of this composition. The whole subject obscure.

§ 2. It may be remarked, in the first place, that the work is ascribed to Nennius chiefly upon the authority of the Prologue, or Prologues, which are prefixed to it in some manuscripts. The Prologues. Two independent Prologues are extant, which agree in many particulars; both ascribe the work to Nennius, the disciple of Elvodugus; but one only contains the date when the work was written, which it assigns to A.D. 858. This dated Prologue is to be found only in one vellum manuscript, (and that of the twelfth century,) and in a modern transcript of the seventeenth century, which agrees so closely with the former as apparently to have been copied from it.¹ The second and shorter Prologue, found as well in the two manuscripts already mentioned, as in several other copies, (none of which are earlier than the twelfth century, and few so ancient,) agrees, for the most part, with that which we have already mentioned, omitting, however, the date when the work was written. Hence, then, it appears that there is the authority of only one ancient manuscript for asserting that Nennius, assuming him to be the author, composed his work in the year 858; and that it is ascribed to him upon the faith of Prologues, of which no copies are to be found anterior to the twelfth century.

The Prologue
contradictory.

§ 3. In regard to the Prologue, it may further be remarked that it speaks of the year 858 as being the same with the twenty-fourth year of the reign of Mervin, king of the Britons (3, 17), dates in the accuracy of whose concurrence a contemporary writer could with difficulty commit an error. In the body of the work, however, we find a contradictory statement. It is there assumed that the Saxons arrived in England A.D. 447 (24, 17), to which are added 429 years, and the two dates added together are said to form a synchronism with the fourth year of Mervin (14, 8), which is here therefore stated to be the year 876. Thus, the Prologue and the text vary no less than thirty-eight years in the year of our Lord which they connect with the regnal year of the sovereign who was upon the throne when the whole is said to have been written; and they moreover show, that, if both be genuine, the body of the work must have been written twenty years before the Prologue.

The chronology of the Prologue rejected.

§ 4. It is not easy to find authority whereupon we can ascertain the period when Mervin began his reign. The Annales Cambrenses place the death of one named Merhin under the year 843; and in A.D. 904 it is stated that king Meruin, the son of Rodri, was slain by the Saxons. The former of these individuals is necessarily excluded from the present calculation; but, granting that it is the latter to whom allusion is made in the Prologue, it will follow that he must have reigned seventy years, that Prologue showing that he ascended the throne in A.D. 834. But, assuming that the authority of the Prologue should here be rejected, and that of the text received, which shows that Meruin came to the throne in A.D. 876, we reduce the whole calculation within the limits of probability, assigning to him a reign of twenty-eight years, namely, from A.D. 876 to A.D. 904.

§ 5. A comparison of these two Prologues with each other makes it difficult to understand why both should be written. The same train of thought pervades each, the expressions are nearly similar, the authorities cited almost identical, and the reasons which the author assigns for writing are the same in both instances. It is obvious, then, that one cannot be considered as a supplement to the other. If both be authentic, we must assume that Nennius, being dissatisfied with one of these Prologues, intended that it should be superseded by the other; but that both have, by some accident, descended to our times, although we cannot pretend to explain how one of them is preserved in only one manuscript, and that manuscript written about the end of the twelfth century.

§ 6. Having, then, to decide between the authenticity of these two Prologues, and observing that they closely agree with each other in diction, subject-matter, and arrangement, our attention is naturally arrested by finding (as has already been remarked) that the longer of them, which ascribes the composition of the work to the year 858, is found in only one early manuscript, while the shorter Prologue occurs in at least five. The style of both is remarkable. Of the two, the shorter Prologue is perhaps the more elegant production, the former being in parts obscure and involved, yet both rise so highly above the barbarous diction of the work itself, that we can scarcely imagine that the author of the 'Historia Britonum' could have written the Prologues which are now attached to it.

The Prologues both of dubious authority.

Nennius the pupil of Elbodus.

§ 7. But to return to the assumed author. Nennius, as has already been mentioned, calls himself the pupil of Elbodus, or Elvodugus. The claims of two individuals of this name, each distinguished for learning and sanctity, demand examination. Of the earlier of these, who was archbishop of Llandaff,¹ little is known, except that he is supposed to have succeeded Dubricius in the year 612.² The other Elbodus, archbishop of North Wales, died, according to the Chronicle of Caradoc of Llancarvan³ and the Annales Cambrenses,⁴ in the year 809. We are hence, on the one hand, furnished with an argument which might be advanced as authenticating the Pro-

³ Cited by Usher, Primord. pp. 87, 1172.

⁴ 'Cadelh rex Pouisiæ moritur; anno proximo, Elbodus episcopus Venedociæ obiit.' Leland, followed by Humphrey Lhuyd and Usher, affirm that he was the instrument of introducing among his refractory countrymen the Roman calculation of Easter, a statement supported by the authority of the unpublished Annales Cambrenses. Bale adds to this, that he wrote an 'Historia sui temporis,' and that he died in the year 610; see Tanner's Bibliotheca Brit. pp. 257, 262, under the words 'Elbodus' and 'Elvodugus Probus.' It has been thought expedient to refrain from embarrassing the text with these contradictory details, resting, as they do, upon such imperfect authority.

logue which ascribes the composition of the ‘Historia Britonum’ to the year 858; but, on the other, are involved in greater difficulty in regard to the information respecting the author furnished by the manuscripts which we are about to consider.

§ 8. The next observation which presents itself is, that the greater number of the manuscripts, indeed all anterior to the twelfth century, contain neither of the Prologues which have been mentioned, and, consequently, that there is no internal evidence upon which they are to be ascribed to Nennius. These anonymous copies begin with some chronological details, which are intended to show the number of years which have elapsed between certain great events. We are there informed that, when the work was written, 796 years had elapsed from the passion of our Saviour (6, 2); a date which varies in various copies, some making the number 800, others 879. Another class of manuscripts joins the year 796 with the thirtieth year of the reign of Anaraught, king of North Wales, the accuracy of which we have no means of testing; but immediately afterwards it throws discredit upon the statement, by conjoining this date with the year of the world 6108, which, according to his own showing (6, 1), carries us on to A.D. 980.

The earliest MSS. do not ascribe it to Nennius.

§ 9. Further chronological particulars are elsewhere preserved. It is asserted that from the birth of our Saviour until the arrival of St. Patrick amongst the Scots, 405 years had elapsed, and that 421 years had passed since that event, a calculation which is equivalent to A.D. 826. This date varies materially in the different manuscripts which have been consulted (§ 16, note). Again, the arrival of the Saxons in Britain is referred to the year 447 (24, 17), to which the writer adds 429, as giving the year when he wrote, bringing us to A.D. 876 (14, 8). Another copy of considerable antiquity professes to have been written in the year 946 or 947; the former of which dates it states, and that correctly, to be the fifth year of the reign of King Edmund.¹ Last of all comes the Paris manuscript, written in the thirteenth century, which ascribes the arrival of the Saxons to A.D. 347, to which it adds 647 years as indicating the period of its composition, carrying us onward to A.D. 994. The earlier manuscripts, therefore, not only do not acknowledge the claims of Nennius, but assign the composition of the anonymous 'Historia Britonum' to dates varying between A.D. 796 and 994, the space of two centuries.

The dates vary so as to be inconsistent with the age of Nennius.

The work frequently ascribed to Gildas in early MSS.

§ 10. This discrepancy in such an important point of literary history is rendered yet more embarrassing when we observe that in some instances the work is ascribed, not to Nennius, but to other individuals. When giving a list of the manuscripts which have been employed in forming this edition, we shall have occasion to show that many of them erroneously² profess to contain the work of Gildas.³ The confusion which pre-

² It may perhaps be conjectured that Gildas had some claim to the 'Historia Britonum;' but, in the absence of all information upon this point, it is expedient to refrain from theorizing.

³ We may here briefly anticipate a few details upon this head of the inquiry. A, a manuscript of the tenth century, does not ascribe the work to Nennius; B, of the end of the twelfth century, does not ascribe it to Nennius; C, of the middle of the twelfth century, does not ascribe it to Nennius; D, of the middle of the twelfth century, ascribes it to Gildas; E, of the beginning of the thirteenth century, ascribes it to Gildas; F, of the beginning of the fourteenth century, does not ascribe it to Nennius; G, written in, or after, vailed in the Middle Ages as to what was really the History of Gildas, and what the History of Nennius, arose from the uncertainty respecting the writings of the latter only; for Beda's quotations from the former afforded the most easy and satisfactory mode of ascertaining what was, in truth, the production of Gildas; therefore no uncertainty could have arisen, had the claims of Nennius been equally clear, and as generally admitted.

§ 11. Finding that the manuscripts of this work which are anterior to the thirteenth century are either anonymous, or ascribe its composition to Gildas, it becomes important to ascertain in what manner the 'Historia Britonum' is cited by the earlier English Historians; we shall find that they confirm the inferences which may be deduced from what has already been advanced respecting the manuscripts. Henry of Huntingdon, for instance, derives a considerable portion of his history of the British kings¹ from the work which we now call Nennius, but appears to have been

early English Historians.

A.D. 1381, ascribes it first to Nennius, and afterwards to Gildas or Nennius; H, of the thirteenth century, ascribes it to Gildas; I, of the sixteenth century, ascribes it to Nennius Sapiens; K, of the thirteenth century, ascribes it to Nennius; L, (the manuscript containing the two Prologues,) of the thirteenth century, ascribes it to Nennius; L 2, (another copy of the work in the same volume,) ascribes it to Gildas; M, of the seventeenth century, (probably transcribed from L,) ascribes it to Nennius; N, of the thirteenth century, ascribes it to Nennius; O, of the twelfth century, does not ascribe it to Nennius; P, of the fourteenth century, ascribes it to Gildas; Q, of the sixteenth century, ascribes it to Gildas; R, of the fourteenth century, ascribes it to Gildas. Besides these, several copies, not collated for the present edition, may be cited. For instance, the Bodleian MS. 163, formerly belonging to Archbishop Usher, has the title, 'Incipiunt Gesta Brittonum, a Gilda Sapiente composita.'

¹ Huntingdon's work, being dedicated to Alexander, bishop of Lincoln, must have been written before A.D. 1147, in which year this prelate died.

ignorant of the existence of a writer of that name. He appears, indeed, to have entertained considerable doubt as to who the author really was, although he upon one occasion falls into the common error of his age in attributing the work to Gildas. Introducing the story of Turnus and his son Brutus, he informs his readers that he did not find it in Beda, but in 'other authors,'¹ and then proceeds with the narrative nearly in the words of Nennius.² Observing an omission upon the part of Beda as to the period when this island was first peopled, he supplies that information from 'a certain author,' and then introduces a long passage copied from the present work.³ An account of the twelve battles gained by Arthur are inserted in the exact words of Nennius, and yet, upon this occasion, 'Gildas Historiographus' is the authority cited;⁴ as if the Archdeacon of Huntingdon had resolved, before terminating his history of the British monarchy, to show how vague was the information regarding it which had descended to the age in which he lived. It appears from these passages that

² Compare the passage in Huntingdon, p. 300, 9, with the present work, § 10, 11, &c. Upon the same page, Huntingdon, speaking of the arrival of the Picts, (which he copies from the same source,) adds, 'Hæc sunt, quæ a scriptis veterum traduntur de adventu Brittonum in partem illam terrarum, quæ Britannia vo-catur, et de adventu Pictorum in insulam eamdem.'

⁴ 'Hæc autem bella et loca bellorum narrat Gildas Historiographus' . . . 313, 51. Compare the section on the same page, commencing at the words, 'Arthurus belliger illis temporibus' . . . with the present work, § 56.

Henry of Huntingdon, although acquainted with the 'Historia Britonum,'¹ attached no great weight to its authority,² and cited it either as an anonymous work, or attributed its composition to Gildas.³

§ 12. Nor is Gildas the only author whose claims to the present work require notice. It is an important fact, that one of the earliest manuscripts, if not the very earliest, extant, ascribes it neither to Nennius nor to Gildas, but to one whom it styles Mark the Hermit. This individual, unknown to our bibliographers and historians, ancient as well as modern, is, in this copy, simply called 'Marcus the Anachorite, a bishop of the British nation,'⁴ and no further information respecting him is afforded by its pages. Now, since this manuscript twice refers to the year 946 or 947,⁵ (and if these passages be not interpolated,) it will follow, beyond all doubt, that Mark the Hermit must have been alive in those years.

§ 13. There appears to be evidence to show, however, either that these passages have been added at a later period, or that the claims of Mark to the authorship of the 'Historia Britonum' are without foundation. Constantius Hericus, an but erroneously, from the authority of Heric.

² Having quoted the history of Brutus, as mentioned above, he says, 'Hæc non certissima sunt,' 301, 6; he introduces information derived from it with a cautious 'dicitur,' 310, 15, (compare this work, § 39,) or a doubting 'scripserunt quidam,' 310, 55 (cf. § 43).

³ We should, probably, have had further proof from Henry of Huntingdon, had not he considered the history of the British kings an uninteresting subject, see 309, 35.

⁵ See the present volume, p. 5, note 7, and p. 24, note 18.

author of considerable reputation, wrote an account of the Life and Miracles of St. Germanus, which he dedicated to the Emperor Charles the Bald, in A.D. 876, or, at latest, in 877.¹ He there cites, as his authority for several miracles wrought by Germanus, the testimony of 'a certain holy old man named Mark, a bishop of the British nation, and a native of that island;² concerning whom he gives further particulars, mentioned in the subjoined note.³ Nor should we fail to remark that this Heric quotes, as from the dictation of Mark, the adventures of Germanus and the Cowherd, which find a place in the 'Historia Britonum.'⁴ That Mark the Hermit, who was an

⁴ The passage then proceeds: 'Hic multis coram sæpius referre solitus erat, Germanum sanctissimum, ut ipsius utar verbis, suæ nationis apostolum, vice quadam, dum Britannias permearet, regis palatium cum suis discipulis introisse.' . . . Ibid.; compare the present work, § 32, etc. with the continuation of the narrative in Heric.

The Annales Benedictini, xxxii. xlv. and the Acta SS. Ord. S. Bened. sec. iv. p. ii. p. 470, may also be consulted for further information concerning Mark, unconnected, however, with the present inquiry.

If the Editor may be permitted to theorize upon such an obscure point, he would venture to account for the title of the Vatican MS. by assuming that some one acquainted with the work of Heric had met with an anonymous copy of the 'Historia Britonum,' which he ventured to ascribe to Mark the Hermit, since he found it recording those miracles of Germanus which Heric had derived from Mark's testimony; instead of which conclusion, it seems more probable that the Legends incorporated in the 'Historia Britonum' were derived either from Heric's narrative, or from the 'litteræ catholicæ,' preserved in his time in Britain, to which Mark referred when narrating the story to Heric. See the Acta SS. above quoted, § 82.

old man in A.D. 876, should have survived until 946, is an improbable supposition; and yet the close manner in which his name is identified with at least a component part of the present work, through the undisputed authority of Heric, is enough to prevent us from seeking elsewhere for the author of that portion.

§ 14. The statements already advanced, however contradictory and unintelligible when viewed in connexion with the tale told by the Prologues, seem clearly to establish the following positions. Results of the inquiry.

1. That the 'Historia Britonum' is the production of an unknown writer.

2. That it is ascribed to Nennius upon the sole authority of Prologues which cannot be traced to an earlier period than the twelfth century, before which period the name of Nennius, as an historian, was probably unknown.

3. That the variations in the different manuscripts are of such a nature as to show that the work has undergone several recensions, in consequence of which its original form or extent cannot now be satisfactorily ascertained.

§ 15. Before leaving this branch of the inquiry, a few concluding remarks may be necessary. It may, perhaps, be expected that the Editor, having ventured to express his doubt as to the authenticity of these Prologues, should be prepared to show when, where, and by whom they were written. In confessing his inability to do so, he would add, that, from the very nature of things, such a discovery is scarcely to be demanded, for the writer of spurious Prologues would cautiously suppress all information tending to show them to be forgeries. But the removal of error is often the first step towards the discovery of truth; and it is not impossible that a more careful investigation of the question might tend satisfactorily to establish what now rests upon only strong circumstantial evidence.¹

The historical value of the 'Historia Britonum.'

§ 16. Passing from the literary history of the work, (which, in compliance with long-established usage, we continue to call Nennius,) a very few remarks upon its intrinsic value, as a document illustrating the Annals of the British nation, may be subjoined. It will be found upon examination that this must be cautiously estimated, and that too high an opinion of it has generally been formed. But it is not without its value. Its chief importance seems to consist in it being, not an historic record of events with which the writer was either personally acquaint-see the articles 3, 5, 6, 7, 8, in Nasmith's Catalogue of that Library (4, Cambr. 1777, pp. 211, 212). The manuscript next in point of antiquity is that yet preserved at Durham, where it was transcribed in the thirteenth century; and another marked G. in our list, which was written at the Priory of Fenchale, in the immediate vicinity of that city. May not we hence infer that these Prologues have a northern origin?

That the Table of Contents prefixed to the copies of both Gildas and Nennius contained in the Cambridge manuscript marked L, have been either interpolated, or written, by a northern hand, is highly probable; see particularly the 'Capitula Gildæ,' Cap. xi., and the 'Capitula Nennii,' Cap. xxiv. The same individual who employed himself upon these, may, perhaps, have supplied the Prologues.

ed, or for which he had coeval written evidence, but as a depository of traditionary information, in the preservation of which the Celtic nations have been always peculiarly interested.¹

§ 17. It is difficult to read the account which it gives of the Trojan origin of the Britons, of the arrival of the Picts and Scots, and of the Scythian nobleman who had resided in Egypt, without feeling that it here represents what may almost be called the mythology of a people ignorant of its true origin, and uncertain to what theory the preference should be given. The account of the Roman period of our history is obscure and confused, made up, apparently, of two distinct narratives, injudiciously blended together,² at the conclusion of which the national prejudices of the writer are perceptible.³ The history of the reign of Vortigern is interrupted to introduce a long account of the miracles of Germanus,⁴ which, upon a comparison of the passages by which it is immediately preceded and followed, seems to have formed no part of the original work. The arrival of the Saxons, the manner in which they gained a footing in this island, the marriage of Vortigern with the daughter of Hengist,⁵ and the surrender of Kent,

the work,

⁵ It will be observed that, when this passage was written, she was not known by the name of Rowena.

have the appearance of genuine British traditions of considerable antiquity. Vortigern's incest with his daughter introduces a second notice of Germanus, not derived from Mark the Hermit,¹ and a further extract from a similar narrative terminates the history of that monarch. The Legend of Patrick then follows, although entirely unconnected with the context;² and the whole concludes with an account of the exploits of Arthur, and the twelve battles in which he routed the Saxons.³ The genealogies of the Saxon monarchs, and the Treatise 'de mirabilibus Britanniae,' formed, as we may believe, no part of the original work; but being of remote antiquity, and found in the greater number of the manuscripts, they have been inserted in the present edition.

further shown by the frequent use of Triads and Legendary Tales.

§ 18. The un-historic character of Nennius is more clearly seen when we observe his mode of dealing with numbers. Here he exhibits a truly Welsh partiality for Triads.⁴ There are three sons of the Spanish knight, and thirty ships with thirty women in each (§ 13); Julius Cæsar returns to Britain, after an absence of three years,

¹ The whole story is rejected by Usher and the Editors of the Acta Sanctorum, tom. vii. Julii, p. 189, § 68.

² There is reason to believe, from the arrangement of the Vatican MS., that this Legend originally formed a Supplement appended to the work (see 41, note ⁴), although it has found its way into the text in all other copies.

³ The British writer appears to have introduced these rather for the purpose of recording the defeat of the Saxons, than for exalting the fame of Arthur. Although the circumstance of 960 men being slain by him with his own hand in one day savours of romance, he had not yet acquired the importance with which Geoffrey of Monmouth subsequently invested him.

with thirty ships, and fights three battles (§ 20); the Roman governors are thrice slain by the Britons (§ 30); Vortigern's castle is thrice destroyed (§ 40); the Saxons are thrice defeated (§ 43); Germanus fasts three days and three nights (§ 47); and Patrick ordains three thousand priests, and offers up three petitions (§ 54). There are also numerous legendary tales, undeserving a place in any historical document. Four thousand men die in one week (§ 13); a tower of glass is discovered in the middle of the sea (§ 13); Vortigern's castle is overthrown by magic, and is to be built only by being sprinkled with the blood of a boy who had no father (§ 40, 41); Germanus fasts forty days and forty nights (§ 47), and the same exploit is performed by Patrick (§ 54). Vortigern and his wives are destroyed by fire from heaven (§ 47), or swallowed up in the earth, and Arthur with his own hand slays nine hundred and sixty men in one battle. After such statements gravely advanced, and undistinguished by any mark of disapprobation or incredulity, no one, it is believed, will venture to give easy credence to the assertions which rest upon the unsupported authority of Nennius.

§ 19. Although the work of Nennius was well known to our antiquaries of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries,¹ and frequently quoted by Usher,² who had collated numerous manuscripts,³

as if for publication, no edition appeared until the year 1691, when Gale inserted it in his Collection of the early English Historians.¹ In its preparation he adopted as the basis of his text the manuscript belonging to the Public Library of Cambridge, which has so frequently been mentioned as containing both the Prologues, as well as much interpolated matter. We are not informed of the reasons which induced him to give the preference to this copy, when he had access to others of greater antiquity; we may therefore presume that he adopted it as containing additional matter which he did not find elsewhere. The notes which he appended contain the Various Readings which he obtained from other manuscripts, chiefly those in the Cottonian Library.

§ 20. In the present edition a plan somewhat different has been followed.² Instead of taking for the groundwork of its text that copy which presents the greatest number of additions, or rather, of interpolated passages, that text has been adopted which is least vitiated by such extraneous matter.³ The errors into which its tran-

¹i. 93—139.

²In justification of his departure from the precedent furnished by Gale, the Editor quotes the higher authority of Usher, who in a letter to Camden expresses himself in these terms. 'In setting out of Ninius it were not amiss, that whatsoever is there more than in Gildas, should be printed in a distinct character from the rest; for so both works, (if we may count them to be two,) should be represented unto us, and the glosses often distinguished from the text, as in the Bennet copy.'—Parr's Life of Archbishop Usher, p. 77.

It appears that when Usher wrote this letter he was partly misled by the rubrics of those manuscripts which ascribe the 'Historia Britonum' to Gildas, and here expresses himself as if the later interpolations had been added by Nennius to what he considered the genuine work of Gildas. Yet even then he is cautious in his assertions, and a more careful examination of the subject convinced him that Gildas was unconnected with this production in any of its varied forms.

³ This MS. is of the tenth century; that which Gale followed is of the end of the twelfth, or beginning of the thirteenth.

scriber had fallen are corrected by other copies of nearly the same antiquity, and of equal purity; while the Various Readings gained from the collation of numerous manuscripts of different ages have been introduced at the bottom of the page. The following manuscripts have been examined for the purpose.¹

A. The Harleian MS. 3859, (fol. 135, b,) a Manuscripts employed. manuscript of the tenth century, in small folio, upon vellum, the most important of all the copies which have been consulted for the present edition, and therefore adopted as the basis of its text. At the bottom of the first page is a defaced coat of arms, and words which appear to be, 'Conventus Mont-Albanensis,' but the whole is too far injured by time to be distinctly seen. If this reading be correct, it may be conjectured that the present volume once formed a portion of the library of the monastery of Montauban in Quercy, not far distant from Toulouse. A note, in the handwriting of Casley, states that it was added to the Harleian Library on 5th January 1729; beyond which fact nothing is known of its previous history.

The 'Historia Britonum' commences on the reverse of a leaf, the former page of which is blank; and is without title, rubric, or colophon. At the top of the first page a more modern, but still ancient hand, has prefixed a title, which has unfortunately suffered in the re-binding of the manuscript. This title appears to have been 'Incipit Computus.'

in the present edition by the | of each.

This copy omits all the matter prior to § 4 of the present edition, but contains the Genealogies, names of Cities, and Miracles, besides a short Chronicle relative to British affairs, and some important Welsh genealogical matter unconnected with the ‘Historia Britonum.’

It is difficult to say whether the handwriting is English or Foreign; the former seems the more probable supposition, which is strengthened by the accuracy with which the Welsh names of places and persons are recorded.

Fac-similes of this, and of some of the other MSS. which have been used, are given in the plates which accompany the present edition.

B. The Cottonian MS. Vespasian, D. xxi. (fol. 1,) written upon vellum, in small quarto, about the end of the twelfth, or commencement of the thirteenth century. It is without title or rubric, either at beginning or end, and commences with the words ‘Brittannia insula a quodam Bruto consule Romano dicta.’ (§ 7.) It contains the Genealogies, the list of British Cities, and the Miracles, but is not divided into chapters. Its text is good, and agrees closely with the manuscript A, which it follows, even when that copy is faulty.

C. The Cottonian MS. Vespasian, B. xxv. (fol. 126, b,) written upon vellum, in small folio, about the middle of the twelfth century. At the commencement of the Table of Contents is the following note, ‘Liber dompni Johannis Holyngburne monachi ecclesiæ Christi Cantuariæ, emptus a quodam fratre, anno 1543 (?) pretium xx^d.’ The same Table of Contents, written in a contemporaneous hand, describes the work here printed as ‘Narratio de Britonibus, et de miraculis Britanniae;’ and it commences, without rubric, by the words, 'Britannia insula a quodam Bruto consule Romano dicta.' (§ 7.) It contains the Genealogies, list of Cities, and the Miracles. The text which it furnishes is, in general, accurate, and agrees closely with the copies already described. Its margins contain several memoranda and Various Readings from other MSS. the first of which states that 'Hic liber alibi inscribitur Gildæ.' These are in a hand of the sixteenth century.

D. The Cottonian MS. Caligula, A. viii. written in quarto, upon vellum, about the middle of the twelfth century, apparently at Durham, during the episcopate of William de St. Barbara, who died in 1153.¹ Prefixed is the rubric, 'Incipit res gesta Britonum a Gylda Sapiente composita,' and the work commences with the words, 'A principio mundi usque ad Diluvium.' (§ 4.) It contains the Genealogies, list of Cities, and the Miracles, but is slightly imperfect at the end. The initial letter of the chapter beginning 'Britannia insula' is illuminated, and considerably larger than those of the other chapters, as if copied from a manuscript which commenced with that passage. Bale, to whom this copy formerly belonged, has enriched its margins with numerous variations from other manuscripts.

E. The Cottonian Manuscript, Nero, D. viii. (fol. 63,) written upon vellum, in folio, about the beginning of the thirteenth century. Prefixed is the rubric, 'Incipiunt exceptiones de libro Gildæ Sapiientis, quem composuit de primis habitatoribus Britanniae, quæ nunc Anglia dicitur, et de excidio ejus.' It omits the Genealogies, but contains the names of the Cities and the Miracles, and concludes with the rubric, 'Finit liber Sancti Gildæ Sapiientis de primis habitatoribus Britanniae, et de excidio ejus.' By an oversight of the rubricator, in this manuscript the present work is made to form the twelfth book to Geoffrey of Monmouth's 'Historia de regibus Brittonum,' to which it immediately follows.

F. The Cottonian Manuscript, Vitellius, A. xiii. (fol. 90, b,) in quarto, upon vellum, written about the beginning of the fourteenth century. It is without title or rubric, and omits all previous to the words, 'Britannia insula a quodam Bruto consule Romano dicta.' (§ 7.) It contains the Genealogies, names of Cities, and Miracles.

G. The Burney Manuscript, 310, (p. 315,) written upon vellum in folio, in the year 1381. It contains the shorter Prologue, to which it prefixes this rubric: 'Incipit Eulogium brevissimum Britanniae insulae, quod Nennius Elvodugi congregavit.' Between the Prologue and the work are these words, 'Explicit Eulogium. Incipit Gesta Brittonum a Gilda Sapiente, aut Nennio, composita.' Its margins contain some of the interpolated passages, in which it agrees closely with K. and N. Omitting the Genealogies, it preserves the names of the Cities and the Miracles, to which is appended the rubric, 'Explicit Gesta Brittonum, a Gilda Sapiente composita.' Some of its peculiar readings may be seen at p. 6, note ⁴; 8, note ²⁰; 11, note ²¹; 13, note ⁴; 14, note ¹³; 27, note ¹⁵; 28, note ¹⁵.

H. The Royal Manuscript, 13 D. v. (fol. 38,) of the thirteenth century, written upon vellum in folio, formerly belonging to the monastery of St. Albans. It commences with the words, ‘A principio mundi usque ad Diluvium,’ (§ 4,) to which it prefixes the rubric, ‘Incipiunt Gesta Brittonum a Gilda Sapiente composita.’ It omits the Genealogies, but contains the names of the Cities and the Miracles.

I. The Royal Manuscript, 13 B. vii. upon paper, in small folio, written in the sixteenth century. It contains the shorter Prologue, to which is prefixed the title, ‘Incipit Eulogium brevissimum Britanniae insulae, quod Nennius Elvodugi discipulus congregavit.’ After the Prologue are the words, ‘Explicit Eulogium. Incipit res gesta a Ninio Sapiente composita.’ It contains the names of the Cities and the Miracles, omitting the Genealogies, and seems to have been copied from a manuscript containing the text as arranged in that marked G. See p. 6, note ⁴; 11, note ²¹; 13, note ⁴; 21, note ¹; 28, note ¹⁵; 35, note ¹.

K. The manuscript numbered cxxxix. in the library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge. It is a folio volume, written upon vellum, (apparently at Durham, see this Preface, § 15, note ¹,) in the thirteenth century. It contains the second of the two Prologues, to which it prefixes the title, ‘Eulogium brevissimum Britanniae insulae, quod Ninnius Elvodugi discipulus congregavit.’ The work itself is entitled, ‘Res gestae a Ninio Sapiente compositae.’ Many of the additions, which are written upon its margins, have been introduced into the text of other copies, see p. 6, note ⁴; 8, note ²⁰; 13, note ⁴ 14, note ¹³;

17, note ¹⁶; 18, note ²⁵; 19, note ⁷; 21, note ¹;
27, note ¹⁵; 29, note ¹⁸; 35, note ¹.

L. A manuscript of the end of the twelfth, or beginning of the thirteenth century, now in the Public Library of the University of Cambridge, marked F. f. i. 27. It is a handsome volume, written in double columns, upon vellum, appears once to have belonged to the monks of Durham, (see this Introduction, § 15, note ¹), and is the only ancient copy which contains both Prologues. It formed, as has already been remarked, the basis of Gale's text; and is the only copy which prefixes to the history a series of Capitula, which contain internal evidence either of forgery or interpolation. These have in this edition been thrown into an Appendix. This manuscript also contains the following verses, which may perhaps be worth preserving, as well as two extracts from some short chronological memoranda.

L 2. A second copy of Nennius, contained in the manuscript last described. It omits the Prologues, and the chapter about Ida king of Northumbria, and has the title, ‘Gesta Brit-tonum a Gilda Sapiente composita.’ It states that 796 years had elapsed from the period of our Lord’s passion.

M. A manuscript of the seventeenth century, formerly belonging to Dr. Hunter the celebrated anatomist, and now, along with the rest of his collections, the property of the University of Glasgow. It appears to be a transcript of the Cambridge manuscript marked L, containing, like it, the two Prologues, and the interpolated passages.² It must be admitted, however, that it furnishes a reading in the second Prologue which is peculiar to itself, and thus restores sense to a passage which is unintelligible in all other copies.³

² It contains no statement showing by whom or when it was copied, or from what original; but it is not improbable that it may have formed part of the collections which were made for the intended second volume of the Decem Scriptores.

description of this volume the Editor is indebted to the kindness of the Rev. William Fleming, D. D.
Professor of Oriental Languages in the University of Glasgow.

N. A manuscript of the thirteenth century, upon vellum, in folio, now belonging to the library of the Dean and Chapter of Durham,¹ (B. ii. 35,) where it has remained since the period when it was written. It commences with the second of the two Prologues, to which it prefixes the title, ‘Incipit Eulogium brevissimum Britanniae insulae, quod Nennius, Elvodugi discipulus, congregavit.’ Between the ‘Eulogium’ and the work itself a marginal note stands thus, ‘Res gesta a Nennio Sapiente composita, de aetatibus mundi;’ but the title which has been adopted is the following, ‘Gesta Britonum a Gilda Sapiente composita.’ Its margins contain numerous additions, agreeing closely with G. and K; these appear to have been added in the year 1166, a note in the same handwriting (at p. 249) referring to that date.

It agrees accurately with the manuscripts severally marked G. and K, see p. 8, note ²⁰; 13, note ⁴; 17, note ¹⁶; 19, note ⁷; 27, note ¹⁵; 28, note ¹⁵; 29, note ¹⁸.

O. A manuscript in the Bibliothèque du Roi, at Paris, (Supplement Latin, 165, ¹⁶) in folio, written upon vellum, in the twelfth century. It is without either title or Prologue, commences with the words, ‘Britannia insula a quodam Bruto consule Romano.’ It varies from most of the other copies by inserting near its commencement a list of the British Cities, and professes to have been written 647 years after A.D. 347. A full collation of this manuscript has not been obtained.

P. A manuscript forming part of the Arundel collection in the College of Arms (xxx), written upon vellum, in quarto, in the fourteenth century. It is ascribed to Gildas, and commences with the words, ‘A principio mundi.’ It shows the progressive additions which have been made to the work, numerous passages being added in the margin; see, for example, p. 16, note ⁹; 17, note ¹⁶; 29, note ³; some of which approximate to the copy ascribed to Mark the Hermit, concerning which see the account of Gunn’s edition, § 22. No important variations have been procured from this manuscript.

Q. The Royal Manuscript, 13 B. xv. upon paper, in small folio, written about the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The title is, ‘Incipiunt Gesta Britonum a Gilda Sapiente composita.’ It commences at § 4, omits the Genealogies, but contains the names of the Cities and the Miracles, and agrees upon the whole with the manuscript marked H.

R. The Cottonian Manuscript, Julius, D. v. written upon vellum, in small quarto, about the end of the fourteenth century. The title is as follows, ‘Incipit res gesta Brittonum a Gilda Sapiente composita;’ and it begins with the words, ‘A principio mundi usque ad Diluvium.’ It omits the Genealogies, but preserves the Miracles and the names of the Cities. A colophon has been erased, which appears to have contained a copy of its title.

§ 21. Besides these copies, several others have been inspected; but, being found to agree closely with manuscripts collated either in whole or in part, have not seemed to demand a fuller investigation. Amongst these are the MS. C. C. C. Cant. 103, of the sixteenth century; a MS. in the Public Library of that University, written in the beginning of the fourteenth century, marked I i, 6, 11; and the Bodleian MS. 163, formerly belonging to Archbishop Usher; to which may be added the collations taken by Smith, the editor of the ‘Historia Ecclesiastica’ of the Venerable Beda, from a manuscript formerly belonging to Ingleby of Ripley.

employed.

§ 22. The following Editions have also been collated.

a. ‘The Historia Brittonum, commonly attributed to Nennius; from a manuscript lately discovered in the library of the Vatican Palace at Rome, edited in the tenth century by Mark the Hermit, with an English version, fac-simile of the original, notes and illustrations by the Rev. W. Gunn, B. D. Rector of Irstead, Norfolk.’ 8^{vo}, Lond. 1819.

The claims of Mark the Hermit to the authorship of the ‘Historia Britonum’ have been already discussed (§ 12, 13). It now only remains to add that the manuscript from which this edition is taken, formed part of the library of Alexandria Christina, Queen of Sweden, and had been procured by her from Alexander Petavius, who had obtained it from the monastery of St. Germain at Paris. Of its former history nothing is known. The text which it furnishes is particularly valuable, and seems to transmit the work in a purer state than it occurs in any other manuscript, especially in regard to its arrangement. It commences with the words, ‘Ab Adam usque ad Diluvium' (§ 4); and states that it was written in the fifth year of the reign of Edmund king of England (see the present work, p. 5, note ⁷). Having proceeded as far as the end of § 6 in our edition, it inserts the names of the nine Roman emperors who were more immediately concerned with Britain, and then introduces the title of the work as follows, 'Incipit Istorìa Brittonum, edita ab anachoreta Marco, ejusdem gentis episcopo,' thereby inducing us to believe that the whole of the previous matter forms no part of the original composition. It inserts (at § 7 of our edition) a list of the twenty-eight British cities alluded to in general terms in the other copies (with one exception). After the history of the arrival of the Saxons in Britain, it refers to the first year of the reign of king Edmund, a passage which bears every appearance of having been interpolated (see p. 24, note ¹⁸). It appears to have ended with the account given of the exploits of Arthur, to which it here adds, that it was written 547 years after the arrival of the Saxons, which it places in A.D. 447, thus carrying the date of its composition, or rather transcription, to A.D. 994, (see p. 49, note ¹²), about which time the Vatican copy may be supposed to have been transcribed. The Legend of Patrick, forming an integral part of the 'Historia Britonum' in all other manuscripts, is appended to this as a distinct work, with a separate colophon.

This copy does not contain the Prologues, Genealogies, or Miracles.

b. The edition prepared by Gale. This is quoted only as exhibiting, amongst its notes, a few Various Readings, which the present Editor has not observed elsewhere. They may perhaps have been derived from one of the Cottonian manuscripts which was burnt in the fire of 1731.

The notes of this edition.

§ 23. Upon these authorities the text of the present edition has been formed. Since it became necessary to exhibit such a body of Various Readings, the Editor considered it incumbent upon him to refrain as much as possible from increasing the supplemental matter by introducing many Notes. Various obscure passages are therefore passed over in silence; many illustrative observations have been omitted; and the few which are given are intended, for the most part, to direct the attention of the reader to those historians who may be consulted with advantage upon the subject under consideration.

Italiam, et, superato Turno, accepit Laviniam filiam Latini, filii Fauni, filii Pici, filii Saturni, in conjugium; et post mortem Latini regnum obtinuit Romanorum vel Latinorum. Ascanius autem Albam condidit, et postea uxorem duxit, 5 et peperit ei filium nomine Silvium. Silvius autem duxit uxorem, et gravida fuit, et nunciatum est Æneæ quod nurus sua gravida esset; et misit ad Ascanium filium suum, ut mitteret magum suum ad considerandam uxorem et exploraret 10 quid haberet in utero, si masculum vel feminam, et magus consideravit uxorem et reversus est. Propter hanc vaticinationem magus occisus est ab Ascanio, quia dixit Ascanio quod masculum haberet in utero mulier, et filius mor- 15 tis erit, quia occideret patrem suum et matrem suam, et erit exosus omnibus hominibus. Sic evenit; in nativitate illius mulier mortua est, et nutritus est filius, et vocatum est nomen ejus Bruto. Post multum intervallum, juxta vatici- 20 nationem magi, dum ipse ludebat cum aliis, ictu

 5 occiderat, et pervenit ad Gallos usque, et ibi condidit civitatem Turonum, quæ vocatur Turnis. Et postea ad istam pervenit insulam, quæ a nomine suo accepit nomen, id est, Brittanniam, et implevit eam cum suo genere, et habitavit ibi.

Primus autem venit Partholomæus cum mille hominibus, tam de viris et mulieribus, et creverunt usque ad quatuor millia hominum; et venit mortalitas super eos, et in una septimana omnes perierunt, et non remansit ex illis etiam unus. Secundus ad Hiberniam venit Nimeth, filius quidam Agnominis, qui fertur navigasse super mare annum et dimidium, et postea tenuit portum in Hibernia, fractis navibus ejus, et mansit ibidem per multos annos, et iterum navigavit cum suis et ad Hispaniam reversus est.

 5 sunt naves illius dum ipse pugnabat apud Dolobellum, qui erat proconsul regi Britannico, qui et ipse Bellinus vocabatur, et filius erat Minocanni, qui occupavit omnes insulas Tyrreni maris; et Julius reversus est sine victoria, cæsis militibus

Secundus post hunc Claudius imperator venit, et in Brittannia imperavit, annis quadraginta octo post adventum Christi, et stragem et bellum fecit magnum, non absque detrimento militum, 15 tamen victor fuit in Brittannia, et postea cum ciulis perrexit ad Orcades insulas, et subjecit sibi, et fecit eas tributarias. In tempore illius quievit dare censum Romanis a Brittannia, sed Brittan-

Primum miraculum de miraculis ejus. Erat ^{His actions while in England.}
 5 quidam rex iniquus atque tyrannus valde, cui nomen erat Benli. Illum vir sanctus voluit visitare, et properare disposuit ad iniquum regem, ut prædicaret illi. At cum ipse homo Dei venisset ad ostium urbis cum comitibus suis, venit portarius et 10 salutavit eos, et miserunt eum ad regem, et rex durum responsum dedit illis et cum juramento dixit, ‘ Si fuerint vel si manserint usque ad caput anni, non venient unquam in medio urbis meæ.’
 Dum ipsi exspectarent janitorem, ut nunciaret
 15 illis sermonem tyranni, dies declinabat ad vesperrum et nox appropinquabat, et nescierunt quo irent. Interea venit unus de servis regis e medio urbis, et inclinavit se ante virum Dei, et nunciavit illis omnia verba tyranni, et invitavit illos ad 20 casam suam, et exierunt cum eo, et benigne suscepit eos. Et ille nihil habebat de omnibus generibus jumentorum, excepta una vacca cum vitulo; et occidit vitulum, et coxit, et posuit ante illos. Et præcepit Sanctus Germanus ut non confringerent os de ossibus ejus, et sic factum est; et in crastino vitulus inventus est ante matrem suam sanus et vivus, incolumisque.

§ 33. Iterum de mane surrexerunt, ut impetrarent salutationem tyranni; at ipsi, cum orarent et expectarent juxta portam arcis, et ecce! vir unus currebat, et sudor illius a vertice usque ad plantas pedum distillabat. Inclinavit se ante illos, et dixit Sanctus Germanus, 'Credis in sanctam Trinitatem?' et respondit illi, 'Credo,' et baptizatus est, et osculavit eum. Et dixit illi, 'Vade in pace, in ista hora morieris, et Angeli Dei in aere expectant te, ut gradieris cum illis ad Dominum, cui credidisti.' Et ipse lætus intravit in arcem, et Præfectus tenuit illum et alligavit, et ante tyrannum ductus et interfectus est. Mos enim erat apud nequissimum tyrannum nisi quis ante solis ortum pervenisset ad servitutem in arce, interficiebatur. Et manserunt tota die juxta portam civitatis, et non impetraverunt ut salutarent tyrannum.

§ 34. Solito ex more supradictus affuit servus, et dixit ei Sanctus Germanus, 'Cave ne unus homo maneat de hominibus tuis in ista nocte in arce.' Et ipse reversus est in arcem et deduxit filios suos, quorum numerus erat novem, et ipsi ad supradictum hospitium cum ipso reversi sunt. Et præcepit Sanctus Germanus manere eos jejunos, et, clausis januis, dixit, 'Vigilantes estote, et si quid evenerit, in arcem nolite aspicere, sed orate indesinenter et ad Dominum vestrum clamate.' Et post modicum intervallum noctis ignis de coelo cecidit et combussit arcem, et omnes homines qui cum tyranno erant, et nusquam apparuerunt usque ad hodiernum diem; et arx non aedificata est usque hodie.

§ 35. In crastino die ille vir, qui hospitalis fuit illis, credidit et baptizatus est cum omnibus filiis suis, et omnis regio cum eis; cui nomen erat Catel, et benedixit ei, et addidit et dixit, 'Non deficiet rex de semine tuo,' (ipse est Catell Durn-

 10 Sancti Germani rex de servo factus est, et omnes filii ejus reges facti sunt, et de semine illorum omnis regio Pouisorum regitur usque in hodiernum diem.

§ 36. Factum est autem postquam metati sunt The Saxons

From a comparison of these various texts we may conclude that the reading should be, 'Amatorem, in propinquo,' or 'Amatorem, in propinquo,' not 'Amatorem, in propinquo,' not 'Amatheam regem.' Pagi, A.D. 431, § 52, advances satisfactory reasons for concluding that this Amator was bishop of Autun, not of Auxerre, as was supposed by Baronius and the Bollandists. Quadragenarius erat quando de captivitate exivit, et per 40 annos didicit et Deo servivit, et 40 prædicavit. In his tribus quadragenariis maxime Patricius æquatur Moysi; nam sicut Moyses fuit 40 annos in domo Pharaonis, sicut in captivitate, et 40 in exilio in terra Madian, et 40 in prædicatione et in ducatu populi,—ita Patricius  40 in exilio inter Gallos, et 40 prædicando et miracula faciendo atque resistendo Loigere regi et magis ejus (sicut Moyses Pharaoni et ejus magis) viriliter et indefesse Deo servivit. Nam bene potest fieri illum fuisse in captivitate per 15 annos et quadragenarium egressum fuisse.

Sed hic attende. Moyses quadragenarius fuit quando de Ægypto exivit in fugam, et ad Ægyptum propter populos Dei missus rediit post 40 annos; et ipse Patricius quadragenarius erat quando de Hibernia in fugam exivit, et post 40 annos missus ad populum Dei excipiendum de manu Diaboli ad Hiberniam rediit. Et uterque per 40 annos in stadio [studio] prædicationis manserunt, et simili fine, et jejuniis non dissimili.'

orientis et deducunt pisces ex ea parte. Alii ad dextram, alii ad sinistram, ad occidentemque, et trahunt pisces ab unaquaque parte. Et aliud genus piscium trahitur ex omnibus partibus. Magnum mirabile pisces in fonte, dum non flu- 5 men fluit in eo, neque ex eo; et in eo inveniuntur quatuor genera piscium, et non est de magnitudine neque de profunditate. Profunditas illius usque ad genua, viginti pedes sunt in longitudine et latitudine, ripas altas habet ex omni parte. 10 Juxta flumen, quod vocatur Guoy, poma inveniuntur super fraxinum in proclivo saltus qui est prope ostio fluminis.

Est aliud miraculum in regione quæ vocatur Guent. Est ibi fovea, a qua ventus flat per omne 15 tempus sine intermissione; et quando non flat ventus in tempore æstatis, de illa fovea incessanter flat, ut nemo possit sustinere, neque ante foveæ profunditatem. Et vocatur nomen ejus With Guint Brittannico sermone, Latine autem Flatio 20 venti. Magnum mirabile est ventus de terra flare.

§ 71. Est aliud miraculum. In Guhyr altare est in loco, qui dicitur Loyngarth, quod nutu Dei fulcitur. Historia istius altaris melius mihi videtur narrare quam reticere. Factus est autem dum 25 Sanctus Iltutus orabat in spelunca, quæ est juxta mare quod alluit terram supradicti loci, (os autem speluncæ ad mare est,) et ecce! navis navigabat ad se de mari et duo viri navigantes eam, et corpus sancti hominis erat cum illis in navi, et altare 30 supra faciem ejus quod nutu Dei fulciebatur, et processit homo Dei obviam illis, et corpus sancti hominis et altare inseparabiliter supra faciem sancti corporis stabat. Et dixerunt ad Sanctum Iltutum, 'Ille homo Dei commendavit nobis ut deduceremus illum ad te, et sepeliremus eum

 5 tecum, et nomen ejus non reveles ullo homini, ut non jurarent per se homines.' Et sepelierunt eum, et post sepulturam illi duo viri reversi sunt ad navim, et navigaverunt. At ille Sanctus Iltutus ecclesiam fundavit circa corpus sancti hominis et
 10 circa altare, et manet usque in hodiernum diem altare nutu Dei fulcitum. Venit quidam regulus ut probaret, portans virgam in manu sua; curvavit eam circa altare ambabus manibus, et tenuit ambabus manibus virgam ex utraque
 15 parte et traxit ad se, et sic veritatem illius probavit, et ille postea per mensem integrum non vixit. Alter vero sub altare aspexit, et aciem oculorum ejus amisit, et ante mensem integrum vitam finivit.

20 § 72. Et aliud mirabile in supradicta regione Guent. Est ibi fons juxta vallum putei Mouric, et lignum in medio fontis, et lavant homines manus suas cum faciebus suis, et lignum sub pedibus suis habent quando lavant. Nam
 25 ego probavi et vidi quando mare inundatur ad mallinam extenditur Sabrina super omnem maritimam et tegit, et usque ad fontem perducitur, et impletur fons de sissa Sabrinæ, et trahit lignum secum usque ad mare magnum, et per spatium 30 trium dierum in mare invertitur, et in quarto die in supradicto fonte invenitur. Factum est autem ut unus de rusticis sepeliret eum in terra ad probandum, et in quarto die inventus est in fonte; et ille rusticus qui eum abscondidit et sepelivit defunctus est ante finem mensis.

§ 73. Est aliud mirabile in regione qui dicitur Buelt. Est ibi cumulus lapidum, et unus lapis ⁵ superpositus super congestum, cum vestigio canis in eo. Quando venatus est porcum Troynt, impressit Cabal, qui erat canis Arthuri militis, vestigium in lapide, et Arthur postea congregavit congestum lapidum sub lapide in quo erat ¹⁰ vestigium canis sui, et vocatur Carn Cabal. Et veniunt homines et tollunt lapidem in manibus suis per spacium diei et noctis, et in crastino die invenitur super congestum suum.

Est aliud miraculum in regione quæ vocatur ¹⁵ Ercing. Habetur ibi sepulchrum juxta fontem qui cognominatur Licat Anir, et viri nomen, qui sepultus est in tumulo, sic vocabatur. Anir filius Arthuri militis erat, et ipse occidit eum ibidem, et sepelivit. Et veniunt homines ad mensuran- ²⁰ dum tumulum; in longitudine aliquando sex pedes, aliquando novem, aliquando quindecim. In qua mensura metieris eum in ista vice, iterum non invenies eum in una mensura; et ego solus probavi. 25

§ 74. Est aliud mirabile in regione quæ vocatur Cereticiaun. Est ibi mons quæ cognominatur Cruc Maur; et est sepulchrum in cacumine illius. Et omnis homo quicumque venerit ad sepulchrum et extenderit se juxta illud, quamvis brevis fuerit, ³⁰ homo, si tres flectiones flectaverit juxta illud, non erit tædium super se usque ad diem mortis suæ, et 10 non gravabitur iterum ullo tædio etiam si abisset solus in extremis finibus cosmi.

§ 75. Primum miraculum est litus sine mari; secundum miraculum, est ibi mons qui gyratur tribus vicibus in anno; tertium miraculum est 15 vadus, quando inundatur mare et ipse inunda-tur, et quando decrescit mare et ipse minuitur; quartum miraculum est lapis qui ambulat in nocturnis temporibus super vallem Citheinn, et projectus est olim in voragine Cereuus, qui est in 20 medio pelagi quod vocatur Mene, et in crastino super ripam supradictæ vallis inventus est sine ambitur, tertio circulo gronna ferri, quarto circulo gronna æris ambitur, et in eo stagno multæ margaritæ inveniuntur, quas ponunt reges in auribus suis.

APPENDIX.

INCIPIUNT CAPITULA.

I. DE sex ætatibus mundi, et quot annos unaquæque tenet.

5 II. Unde dicta sit Britannia, et a quo sit sic nominata, qualiterque sita, et quot in longum et transversum miliaria habet, quotque civitates in se continet; quot genera hominum intra se sustinet, quotque adjacentes insulas possidet; qui-10 bus præstantioribus fluminibus interluitur, per quæ divitias et delicias exterorum regnorum deferuntur.

III. Quod Britones impleverunt eam a mari usque ad mare; et a quo tempore, secundum 15 Annales Romanorum, inhabitari cœpit; qualiterque Romanorum sugillatio, quod in nos injuste extorquent, refelli potest; de ortu etiam Bruti et proavorum ejus, et quid magus de eo necdum nato prædixerit.

20 IV. De regno Æneæ, Ascanii, Silvii, Bruti et Posthumi; et quod Bruto Britanniam venerit tempore sacerdotis Heli.

V. De adventu Pictorum in Britanniam, et quomodo Orcades Insulas occupaverint et hac-25 tenus obtinuerint.

VI. Quod Scotti de Hispania venerint, et quo tempore Hiberniam inhabitare cœperint; et qualiter Bartholomeum de Hibernia pestilentia cum suis craserit, et de quodam Nimec, qui postea illo venit, sed et postea cum suis rediit.

VII. De tribus filiis cujusdam militis Hispaniæ, qui Hiberniam applicuerunt; quomodo castellum vitreum in mari viderunt, et illud oppugnant perierunt. Sed tamen residui eorum cum supervenientibus Hispanis paulatim totam Hiberniam possiderunt.

VIII. Quod nulla certa historia originis Scottorum continetur.

IX. Quamdiu Hibernia inhabitabilis fuit, et de quodam nobili Scythæ genero Pharaonis, quem, rege submerso cum suis, Ægyptii expulerunt; quomodo peregrinando vagatus sit, et quando Hiberniam appulerit; et quot annos Tribuni, Dictatores, ac Consules Rempubicam obtinuerunt.

X. Qua ætate Britones venerunt ad Britanniam, et qua Scithæ, (id est, Scotti,) qui nunc dicuntur Hibernenses, ad Hiberniam; et quomodo Britones a Pictis et Scottis impugnati sint: quo etiam tempore Romani monarchiam mundi adepti fuerint, et Scottorum peritiam.

XI. De supputatione annorum incarnationis Domini, Patricii, Brigidæ, Columkillæ; et quo anno Saxones Britanniam venerint.

XII. Aliud experimentum de ortu Britonum indigenarum, traditionibus seniorum, et ex veteribus libris veterum Britonum inventum; quomodo tres filii Noe diviserunt orbem terrarum in tres partes post Diluvium.

XIII. De nobilitate Britonum, et quod illi de genere Japhet descenderint a quodam Alanio, cujus genealogiam usque ad Adam protoplastum ducit.

²⁴ Et Scottorum peritiam.] Ex Scottorum peritia (?)

XIV. Quomodo Julius Cæsar bis a Britonibus repulsus sit, et quomodo bis victus de Britannia sine pace et censu in fugam rediit.

XV. Qualiter tertio, superatis Britonibus, insulam occupavit, Britonesque sibi subjugavit et illos tributarios fecit, censumque reddere coegit.

XVI. Quod in honorem victoriæ Julii, mensis Julius, qui et Quintilis, dedicatus sit.

XVII. Quod Claudius Imperator cum magno labore et detrimento secundo post Julium Britones vicit, et usque Orcades totam insulam obse-dit; et ubi obierit.

XVIII. Quanto tempore ab incarnatione Domini Britones fidem Christi susceperunt.

XIX. Qualiter Severus Imperator tertius murum trans insulam ob incursionem Pictorum Scottorumque facere præcepit, et illos a Britonibus divisit, et ubi postea peremptus.

XX. Quomodo Carutius Imperator vindicatus sit Severum, satiatus sanguine Britonum; et ubi fornicem triumphalem in memoriam suæ victoriæ construxit.

XXI. De Constantio Constantini Magni filio, ubi obierit et sepultus sit, et quæ semina in pavimento urbis seruerit.

XXII. De Maximo Imperatore, cujus temporibus Sanctus Martinus virtutibus claruit, et quando Imperatores Cæsares nominari desierunt.

XXIII. De Maximiano Tyranno, qui fretus milite Britonum Gratianum occidit Imperatorem, et Britanniam juvenili flore spoliavit, ac Britanniam Minorem eis ad incolatum dedit, sicque eos transmigrare fecit; et quod nunquam postea reverti meruit.

³⁴ Meruit.] Revestiri meruit, MS.; reverti potuerunt, Gale.

XXIV. De secundo etiam Severo, qui solita structura murum alterum, ad arcendos Pictos et Scottos, fieri a Tinemuthe usque Bowenens præcepit.

XXV. De Constantio, qui Britonibus in Britannia Imperator ultimus præfuit; et quamdiu regnum Romanorum in Britones perduravit, et quando illi Romanos ulterius recipere noluerunt.

XXVI. Quo tempore Britones jugum Romanorum abjecerunt; et quando Nicæna synodus, 10 Ambrosius, Martinus, Hieronymus, floruerunt, et de Maximiniano Tyranno et filio ejus victoriæ; qualiter et ubi interfecti fuerunt. Et quot anni ab initio mundi et ab incarnatione Christi usque ad illud tempus transierunt. 15

XXVII. Quot vicibus Britones Romanorum duces occiderunt, et qua calliditate eos tamen semper ad auxilia sibi ferenda provocaverunt. Et quot anni Britones sub dominio Romanorum fuerunt. 20

XXVIII. Quod ab expulsiōe Romanorum usque ad adventum Saxonum, (per annos videlicet XL,) tota Britannia sub maximo metu fuit; et quando Vortigernus rex impius regnavit, quot timoribus quantisque anxietatibus oppressus exstitit; quoto anno a passione Domini Saxones suscepit, et insulam Tanet ad inhabitandum tradidit; et de prosapia etiam Hengisti, et quomodo Britanniam venit; et imperium Romanorum super Britones tempus omnino esse desiit. 30

XXIX. Quando Sanctus Germanus fidem prædicaturus Britanniam venerit, et Pelagianam hæresim exstirpavit, damnavit, et omnino destruxit.

XXX. De Benli rege infideli et tyranno, qui Sanctum Germanum recipere noluit, sed aditum domus suæ prohibuerit. 35

XXXI. De servo, qui eum ad hospitium invitavit, et de vitulo nocte occiso, cocto et comesto, et mane coram matre vivo, sano et integro invento.

5 XXXII. De quodam viro ab eo baptizato, et juxta ejus vaticinium mox defuncto, et ab angelo Dei suscepto.

XXXIII. Qualiter hospitis sui filios de oppido educi præcepit, et nocte ipsa arcem cum rege 10 ignis de cœlo funditus consumsit.

XXXIV. Quomodo vir ille, qui sanctum hospitio recepit, credidit, et baptizatus fuit, et juxta verbum ejus de servo rex factus est de regno Powisorum, et omnes filii ejus post eum.

15 XXXV. Qualiter Britones annonas Saxonibus promiserunt, ut pro eis adversus hostes, (scilicet Pictos et Scottos,) dimicarent, sed postea facere noluerunt.

XXXVI. Qualiter rex Vortigernus Rom-
20 wennam filiam Hengisti adamaverit et duxerit, et Cantiam sibi in dotem dederit.

XXXVII. Qualiter Hengistus Octam filium suum, et Ebissam filium Hors fratris sui, ad aquilonales partes Britanniae invitavit, et quam 25 tiose gens Saxonum per Hengistum postea clam et parumper venerit.

XXXVIII. Quomodo rex Vortigernus filiam suam propriam violaverit; et de ea filium genuerit, et crimen in episcopum retorquere volue-30 rit; et Sancto Germano imperante, in concilio coram omnibus ab infante proditum scelus illius sit, et sic a beato Germano et omni conventu damnatus sit.

XXXIX. Quale consilium Britones regi Vortigerno dederint.

¹⁴ Filii.] Filios, MS.

XL. Quomodo cum magis suis locum castelli quærens Snaudune, (id est, Mons Nivis,) reperit, sed omnis collecta materies tertio, subito terra dehiscente, absorpta sit.

XLI. Quomodo rex Vortigernus magos suos 5 consuluit, qui ei responderunt, dicentes, se non posse arcem ædificare, ni prius aspergeretur sanguine alicujus pueri, qui sine patre conciperetur.

XLII. De puero sine patre quæsito et invento; quid de stagno sub terra posito, vase, 10 tentorio et draconibus, et eorum duello, prædixerit, et qualiter hæc omnia exposuerit.

XLIII. Qualiter rex Vortigernus Ambrosio arcem dedit, quam ædificare non potuit.

XLIV. De Vortemir filio Vortigerni regis, 15 qualiter Saxones cum principibus eorum, interfecto Hors, viriliter pepulit, et per quinquennium abegit.

XLV. De tribus bellis principalibus, quæ Vortemir contra Saxones gessit; et quid moriens de 20 se sepeliendo præceperit.

XLVI. Qualiter, post obitum Vortemir, Vortigernus iterum Saxones recepit, et de simulata pacis concordia per Saxones erga Britones.

XLVII. Quomodo ipse Vortigernus dolo a 25 Saxonibus captus fuerit, et suggestione Hengisti Vortigernum redimere se solum coegerunt, et quas terras pro redemptione sua acceperint, et qua fraudulentia Saxones cultellis Britones trescentos viros optimos occiderint. 30

XLVIII. De secundo adventu Sancti Germani in Britanniam, et qualiter fugientem Vortigernum, ut ei fidem prædicaret, Sanctus Germanus sollicitè subsecutus sit, et nocte, igne de cœlo cadente, rex in arce cum suis exustus fuit. 35

XLIX. Quod quædam assertio sit, quod cor ejus ex dolore crepuerit.

L. Item, aliorum opinio astruit, quod terra eum deglutiverit, cum nihil de eo, vel suis, residuum inveniri in terra potuerit.

LI. Quod quatuor filios Vortigernus habuerit; 5 et de Sancto Fausto, quem de filia sua genuerit.

LII. De Vortigerni progenie, et retrograda proavorum, tritavorum, et atavorum ejusdem serie.

LIII. De reditu Sancti Germani, et captivitate 10 Sancti Patricii; et quomodo Romam ierit et plura didicerit; et Palladius Scottis prædicaturus apud Pictos obierit.

LIV. Quod, angelo monente, ad Scottos convertendos Sanctus Patricius missus sit.

15 LV. Ubi et a quibus Sanctus Patricius episcopus ordinatus sit, ibique nomen suum immutaverit.

LVI. Quod prius Britonibus prædicaverit, et deinde in Hiberniam migraverit.

20 LVII. Quo anno Incarnationis Dominicæ incepit ibi prædicare, vel cujus regis tempore, et quot annos prædicaverit, vel quanta miracula perpetraverit.

LVIII. Quæ scripserit, quot episcopos ecclesiæ 25 vel presbyteros consecraverit; quot reges et hominum millia baptizaverit, et ubi per dies quadraginta jejunaverit et oraverit.

LIX. Quod tres petitiones in acervo Ely a Domino impetraverit, et in specie avium animas 30 Hibernensium fidelium ad se convenisse viderit.

LX. Quod quatuor, et quibus modis, Sanctus Patricius Moysi legislatori comparetur et æquiparetur.

LXI. De morte Hengisti, et quod post ejus 35 obitum Octa filius ejus tenuit regnum Cantuariensium.

LXII. De Arturo rege belligero, et de duodecim bellis, quæ adversus Saxones habuit ; et de imagine sanctæ Mariæ, in qua triumphaverit, et quot adversariorum uno impetu prostraverit.

LXIII. Quod Saxones semper et sine intermissione de Germania contra Britones auxilium 5 petebant, et multipliciter augebantur, et secum reges, ut regnarent super eos, deducebant, usque ad Ida, qui primus regnavit in Bernicia.

LXIV. De Ida primo Northumbrorum rege, et ejus genere ; et de Sancti Paulini archiepiscopi 10 baptisate.

LXV. Quæ sint nomina viginti et octo civitatum præcipuarum Britanniae.
